

Giant

Bounding across the forest of green
Wandering about as always seen
In a large protective herd
Beautiful ears like the wings of a bird

Ivory tusks catch the attention of all
Scooping up leaves from trees so tall
A bellowing sound trumpets in the air
The noise echoing everywhere

Water splashing all over
Little ones huddling in closer
Colossal an enormous size
Adorable, cute; soft baby eyes

Rushing around swishing their tail
Watching birds fly and sail
Their rock hard resembling a pillar
Ever so large compared to a caterpillar

A body like a big grey stone; rough
Like a strong concrete wall all tough
Sharp eyes look all around
One giant is stomping across the ground
